

REDMOND GOAT MINERAL ROCK ON A ROPE

PRODUCT BRIEF

Redmond Goat Mineral Rock on a Rope is a premium sea salt with naturally occurring essential trace minerals that can be easily hung and offered free choice.

Goats are browsers with a reputation for nibbling, however they are much more discriminating about what they actually consume. Goats obtain their mineral needs from forage, feed, and sometimes water supply. Deficiencies are on the rise because feeds and forage can lack the correct quantity and spectrum of minerals goats require for optimum health. According to Mamoon Rashid (sheep and goat specialist with Manitoba Agriculture, Food, and Rural Initiatives) a free-choice supplement of loose minerals and salts will effectively help you meet the minerals demands of your herd.

TALKING POINTS

HOW DO I USE IT?

Redmond Goat Mineral Rock on a Rope is easy to hang or place anywhere to offer your goats free choice year round.

WHEN SHOULD I USE BLOCKS INSTEAD OF LOOSE MINERALS?

- Provide tasty enrichment to help reduce destructive or harmful boredom behaviors
- To quickly boost your number of mineral stations for large lots or pastures

DOES REDMOND GOAT MINERAL HAVE DDGS?

Redmond products do not contain dried distiller grains with solubles (DDGS); they simply do not need it. According to Dr. Larry L. Berger Ph.D (Professor of Animal Nutrition, University of Illinois), "Salt is a natural carrier for trace minerals, since all farm animals have a natural appetite for salt. Because [of this], it can be used as a delivery mechanism to ensure adequate intake of less palatable nutrients and as a feed intake limiter."

DDGS products require very careful moderation to ensure livestock do not eat too much, especially for smaller animals like sheep and goats.
